Architectural Images

The first new buildings on Columbia’s Manhattanville campus, Jerome L. Greene Science Center and Lenfest Center for the Arts, designed by Renzo Piano Building Workshop, will come to life during the 2016-17 academic year.

1. Lenfest Center for the Arts (left) and Jerome L. Greene Science Center (right). Photograph by © Columbia University/Frank Oudeman

2. Jerome L. Greene Science Center, seen from the southeast. Photograph by © Columbia University/Frank Oudeman

manhattanville.columbia.edu
3. Jerome L. Greene Science Center, seen from the 125th Street #1 train subway platform. Photograph by © Columbia University/Frank Oudeman

4. Jerome L. Greene Science Center: Collaborative meeting spaces and open-air staircases that connect two floors. Photograph by © Columbia University/Frank Oudeman

5. Jerome L. Greene Science Center: Double-height meeting and interactive spaces. Photograph by © Columbia University/Frank Oudeman

manhattanville.columbia.edu
6. Detail of Jerome L. Greene Science Center. Photograph by © Columbia University/Frank Oudeman

7. Detail of double-pane glass walls in Jerome L. Greene Science Center. © Renzo Piano Building Workshop (design architect) and Davis Brody Bond (executive architect), Photograph by Nic Lehoux

8. Aerial view of Manhattanville campus. Photograph by © Columbia University/ Eileen Barroso

manhattanville.columbia.edu
9. Lenfest Center for the Arts. Rendering by © Renzo Piano Building Workshop (design architect) and Davis Brody Bond (executive architect)

10. Lenfest Center for the Arts: The Miriam and Ira D. Wallach Art Gallery. © Renzo Piano Building Workshop (design architect) and Davis Brody Bond (executive architect), Rendering by Dionysios Tsagkaropoulos

11. Lenfest Center for the Arts: The Katharina Otto-Bernstein Screening Room. © Renzo Piano Building Workshop (design architect) and Davis Brody Bond (executive architect), Rendering by Dionysios Tsagkaropoulos

manhattanville.columbia.edu
12. Lenfest Center for the Arts: A flexible performance space, which will showcase thesis productions and support innovation in the performing arts. © Renzo Piano Building Workshop (design architect) and Davis Brody Bond (executive architect), Rendering by Dionysios Tsagkaropoulos

13. Lenfest Center for the Arts: The Lantern, an open presentation space, which will host a variety of public programs and events. © Renzo Piano Building Workshop (design architect) and Davis Brody Bond (executive architect), Rendering by Dionysios Tsagkaropoulos

Press contact for high-resolution images:
Victoria Benitez
Director of Communications
Columbia University
vbenitez@columbia.edu
212-854-6732

manhattanville.columbia.edu